

The New York Times

March 5, 2008 edition

Butch Cassidy Supplies the Wine

Fred R. Conrad/The New York Times

By FLORENCE FABRICANT

They may be the perfect wines to go with chips and Newman's Own salsa or with pasta and Newman's Own sauce. Paul Newman's company, which has donated all profits for educational and charitable purposes through the Newman's Own Foundation for the past 25 years, has added wines to its line of products.

There is a crisp, citrusy 2006 chardonnay with a hint of cardamom in its bouquet, and a refreshingly clean finish. The 2006 cabernet sauvignon has bold fruit balanced with acidity and suggestions of licorice and spice. Both are good, all-purpose table wines, and each label features Mr. Newman's face and a hat that he wore in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." One shows a derby, the other a cowboy hat.

The wines are made by Rebel Wine Company in St. Helena, Calif., and sell for about $16. They are available now in Connecticut and a number of other states. New Jersey will be added this month and sales in New York are to begin on April 1.